The purchase of a 3D printer and a high-performance computer is essential for strengthening our research activities. These instruments will support advanced research, prototype development, data analysis, and model visualization, particularly during field-based research projects. A 3D printer enables the rapid creation of accurate models and experimental components, while a powerful computer is necessary for processing research data, simulation, design, and documentation. Procuring these facilities will enhance research quality, improve efficiency, and promote innovation. Therefore, approval for the purchase of a 3D printer and a high-performance computer is strongly recommended to support the institute's research and development objectives.
